REASONS

Why SEAA Membership is a GOOD Investment.

1 Your Industry

No other national association represents the unique interests of all steel erectors and fabricators. Members are experts in construction of commercial buildings, arenas, bridges, and highway structures. Members enjoy opportunities to network with other industry professionals at the Annual Convention, golf tournaments, member events, and training classes.

2 Improve Safety and Productivity

Members have access to custom Ironworker Craft Training Curriculum. Studies show 24% of businesses experience lower productivity due to the lack of skilled ironworkers and welders. A better trained workforce delivers lower accidents rates, higher productivity, and increased profits.

3 Accredited Credentials at Reduced Cost

SEAA's NCCER (National Center for Construction Education and Research) sponsorship means that member companies can provide industry-recognized credentials to their employees with the benefit of SEAA administrative support and at a lower cost to members than going direct through NCCER.

4 Competitive Advantage

SEAA's U.S. Department of Labor-approved Ironworker Apprenticeship Program allows members to create formal training that meets standards recognized by Federal and State governments. Participation allows merit shop contractors to utilize government approved apprenticeship rates on Davis Bacon Wage Projects.

5 Influence Industry Standards

SEAA strategic partnerships with industry groups provide member companies with industry representation with American Institute of Steel Construction, Steel Joist Institute, Steel Deck Institute, National Institute of Steel Detailing, and others.
